Message from our President

As the summer slowly fades away and we enter yet another Canadian fall and winter season, it is time to begin planning for 2008 and beyond. The Building Committee is hard at work on translating the renovation project into reality. Over the next few months, most of the focus of the Board will be on getting this work done on time and within budget.

Our other committees are also making plans for the coming year which we will share with you in the coming weeks.

In closing, I wish all of you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Niloufer Bhesania,
President

Elections for the Board of Directors

Do you have a strong sense of commitment to the goals of the OZCF? Do you have personal time that you would like to use to benefit your community? Are you able to relate well to and work well with people? If you answered yes to any of these questions, you are a good candidate for the Board of Directors of the OZCF.

We are looking for a variety of skill sets on the Board – mobeds, accountants and lawyers, fundraising experience, planning events, construction/building experience.

Every 2 years, a maximum of 13 members are elected to the Board of Directors (“the Board”) by the membership. The next election will take place at the AGM in the summer of 2008. These Board members then elect the 4 officers (President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer) from the 13 Directors.

If you are interested in being elected to the Board, please contact any Board member and let them know. Official nomination forms will be sent out prior to the AGM as specified in the By-Laws.

Children's Halloween Party

This year marked the 1st Children's Halloween Party! One and all came out on Saturday, October 28 in the evening to enjoy games, prizes, pumpkin carving, food and fun! It was a great chance for the young ones to dress up in their favourite costumes and play small and large group games. A little wind and rain didn't stop anyone, as the crowd picked their pumpkins and enjoyed some hot chocolate, hot dogs, and snacks! A Big Thank You to the organizer, Armaity Anandasagar, as well as her team of volunteers, the Katila and Engineer families, Fred and Kashmira Laher, Zarina Gutta, Zubin Jasavala, Jimmy Bhesania, Charis Wania, Benifer and Hozi Patel, Cyrus Gazdar, and the Medhora family.

Obituaries

Khorshed Jamshed Mody, mother of Thrity Pfuetzner (Uwe) and Vera Mistry (Kersi), grandmother of Natasha, Cyrus (Roopa) and Kevin, great grandmother of Angad and Leah passed away on September 17, 2007.

Our Grandmother was everyone's "Granny". She could steal her way into hearts as only a warmhearted grandmother could. She experienced hardship early in life, losing her Mother in childhood and becoming a widow at thirty-five. Despite this, her life was filled with happiness and good fortune. One never saw any evidence of suffering. Instead, it was her eagerness for travel, her wisdom and her charity that stood out. If she had five dollars in her pocket, she believed three should be for someone else. She loved her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, but had affection for all children. In a box in her bedroom she collected countless photos of the children she knew. They may have been cousins' children, or cousins' children's children. In her 85 years she touched and was touched by all of their lives. It is impossible to capture in words what this woman meant to us, but since her death, the words heard most often are: wise, compassionate, eager for experience, zest for life. She was patient and adaptable, she gave sound advice and she knew when to call a spade a spade. Most importantly, she lived her life till the end with eagerness and passion. Old age slowed her down, but it didn't temper her adventurous spirit. She still wanted to go everywhere everyone else was going and it appeared she was oblivious to her limitations.

At the age of 83 she cunningly enlisted me, her granddaughter, to take her to Paris. Naively, I let her convince me we could do a mini tour - slowly. We were wrong, but only I felt it was a mistake. It took her half an hour and two rest stops to simply exit the hotel's lobby. Finally, standing on the Paris street, just outside the hotel, Granny put her hand on her back and breathed a sigh of fatigue while I stood discouraged beside her. Granny mustered a big smile, raised her hand, and with her head cocked to one side said, "Toon chalti tha, hoon ouch" (you walk ahead, I'll catch up)!

The best way to honour and remember her is to live by the examples she set for us. To pass on the love she showed us, be good to the community we belong to, be honest with ourselves and others around us, and most importantly enjoy what life has to offer us. She passed away just as she said she wanted to. Not in a hospital bed, not in a nursing home, not bedridden, but still active and full of determination. Her death was extremely sudden and a close relative describes it best: "God didn't want her to know He was taking her away. Even that pain of parting, she didn't have to endure."

- submitted by Granddaughter Natasha Mistry.

Rohinton Dara Jehangir, husband of Pervin, father of Freny, Fariha & Zaira suddenly passed away in Las Vegas on October 13, 2007. He was a wonderful man and will be missed by all.

Our condolences go to both the families. May Ahura Mazda grant them the strength to bear their loss.

NextGen 2007

The Zoroastrian Association of Metropolitan Chicago was host to the 1st NG07 (NextGenNow) Workshop, from October 12 – 14, 2007 in conjunction with FEZANA/ZYNA. It is the first in a series of conferences designed to strengthen and support the perpetuation of Zarathushti communities by stimulating inter-generational dialogue, cultivating leadership, and paving a path for real-world problem solving for the youth (under 40 years of age).

Co-chaired by Jim Engineer (Chicago) and Nikan Khatibi (California), the very interactive conference addressed such issues as Education-Awareness-Perpetuation, Achieving Harmony through Diversity and Community Building-The Next Generation Blueprint. With approx 50 youth and guest in attendance, the history of the OZCF was presented by Xerxes Wania during the last session, Achieving Harmony through Diversity and Community Building-The Next Generation Blueprint. The OZCF was very well received by the audience as a well run, diversified and visionary organization focused on the next generation.

The conference ended with a community lunch and jashan and some inspirational words by Mr. Rohinton Rivetna, FEZANA, ZAC, and WZCC who focused on passing the torch.

Stay in touch online! Visit the NextGenNow Facebook group and join the 47 other Zarathushti next generation leaders throughout the world who have already signed up! Facebook members search 'NextGenerationNow' to join. To join Facebook visit facebook.com.

Keeping their faith's flame lit: Young Zoroastrians fear for the future of a religion that shaped other faiths By Ron Grossman, Tribune staff reporter, October 15, 2007

The following is an excerpt from this article, courtesy of the Chicago Tribune...to read the article in its entirety, please see www.ChicagoTribune.com

When a group of young Zoroastrian people gathered in a Chicago suburb over the weekend to plan and pray for their religion's survival, they sang a modern hymn of praise to their adopted homeland with a sentiment at the heart of their ancient faith.

Once, the Zoroastrian community numbered in the millions with its compass running from Greece through the Middle East to India. Now there are fewer -- perhaps far fewer -- than 200,000 Zoroastrians left worldwide, about 10,000 in the United States. Should that statistical decline continue, it could mean the end of a tradition influential far beyond its own boundaries: Zoroastrianism helped shape Judaism, Christianity and Islam. Yet most Americans would scarcely note its passing nor recognize the indebtedness of their own faith. "After 9/11, a boy in my high school asked if I was a Hindu, a Muslim or a terrorist," said Motafram, 20, a student at the University of Michigan who grew up in Milwaukee. In fact, she is none of those, belonging instead to a faith with a straightforward ethic: "Think good thoughts, say good words, do good deeds." Such was the teaching of the prophet Zarathustra, as explained in "My First Zoroastrian Prayer Book". The religious hymns Zarathustra composed and subsequent elaborations on his teaching answer a theological question perplexing too many faiths; If God is good, why does evil exist? The Zoroastrians' answer is that there is an evil divinity as well as a good one at work in the universe. Scholars of religion characterize Zoroastrianism as a dualism, contrasting it with the monotheism of some other faiths. Neville Vazifdar, a participant in the Burr Ridge conference, said he can't understand how others can resist his ancestors' answer to the existence of evil. "Every person, if he has a whit of sense, ought to see the logical necessity of dualism," said Vazifdar, 20, of Bolingbrook. "It's so simple, yet so complex." Vazifdar is a mobed, as the group's priests are called. "We're not fire worshipers, as some people think," said Vazifdar, an engineering student. "Fire is the symbol of the inner light we strive to realize."

'Sunset' if not the 'twilight' Farzin Avari, a student from Marietta, Ga., conducted a survey of the community and concluded, writing in Fezana Journal, the community's magazine, that "unless we sit up and do something, it could very well be the 'sunset' if not the 'twilight.'" Her census showed its membership fast declining in India and suggests its fate in the U.S. hangs in the balance. Forty-six percent of North American Zoroastrians marry outsiders, she found. Avari also put the demographic dilemma in personal terms. "I was the first Zoroastrian to graduate from my high school," said Avari, 18. "I'll probably be the last Zoroastrian to graduate from there too."
